Local Area History

Pudsey is a market town in Leeds, West Yorkshire. Once an independent town, it was included into the metropolitan borough of Leeds in 1974, and is located midway between Bradford and Leeds city centres.

Pudsey constitutes the areas of Fartown, Troydale, Littlemoor, Lowtown, Uppermoor and Chapletown. There is also the village of Fulneck, the district of Stanningley and part of the district of Tyersal.

The name Pudsey occurs in the 1086 Domesday books as “Podechesaie” and “Podchesai”, but in the early 6th century Pudsey and the neighbourhood appear to have been the centre of the Kingdom of Elmet, which retained its independence for more than 200 years after other more petty kingdoms had been subdued by the Angles.

The town was famous in the 18th and 19th centuries for its wool manufacture, and, from the 19th century for cricket. Yorkshire cricketers Sir Len Hutton, Herbert Sutcliffe, Ray Illingworth and Matthew Hoggard all learned to play in Pudsey. One of the 19th century Yorkshire cricketers John Tunncliffe was born in Lowtown.

During the Industrial Revolution Pudsey was said to be one of the most polluted areas of the UK due to its position within a slight valley and between the two industrial cities of Leeds and Bradford. As a result whichever way the wind blew Pudsey would become covered in thick soot. The temperature inversion created by being in the valley led to the soot becoming trapped leading to dense smog in the area. This is believed to have led to jokes that Pigeons in Pudsey park flew backwards in order to keep the soot out of their eyes!

Pudsey Parish Church

Local Area Activities

There are several recreational parks in Pudsey, the largest is Pudsey Park with its large play area for children. Its pets corner, aquarium, bird houses and tropical greenhouse are currently being refurbished and will be opened in March 2010. There is also Queens Park where the Pudsey carnival is held once a year.

Pudsey's market operates on Tuesday, Friday and Saturday and has recently been refurbished. Pudsey has also seen the introduction of a monthly farmers' market with a range of stalls selling meat, fish, dairy produce, organic fruit and vegetables, delicatessen and craftware.

Pudsey town centre has many amenities and a shopping centre which includes high street stores such as Boots and B&M's, etc. In keeping with many affluent areas it has its fair share of banks and estate agents. Following the closure of KwikSave supermarkets across the country, Pudsey's store has been bought by Sainsbury's. Until the administration of the group, Pudsey had a Woolworths situated on Church Lane. It is now a B&M Home Bargains.

Pudsey's historic town hall is benefiting from a new, energy-efficient lighting project to highlight its most interesting features. The multi-coloured lights can be changed to offer 255 different scenes.

Local Area History

Bramley is a district in west Leeds, West Yorkshire, England. It is an old industrial area and home to a lot of 19th century architecture alongside 20th century council housing in the east and private suburban housing to the west. It has its own railway station (off Stanningley Road) which is on the Caldervale and Leeds to Bradford lines. Bramley village was mentioned in the 1086 Domesday Book as "Brameleia" and "Bramelie."

The centre of Bramley was redeveloped in the 1960s and 1970s. The Bramley Shopping Centre replaced the former town centre. The Bramley Shopping Centre was Leeds' second purpose built town centre after Seacroft town centre.
